Here’s the research project info:

RELATE:
Founded in 1979, the RELATE Institute is a non-profit organization with the specific tasks of developing research and outreach tools that can be used directly with the public and that can be used to gather information about relationships. The consortium consists of a group of scholars, researchers, family life educators, and counselors from varied religious and educational backgrounds who are dedicated to strengthening and understanding premarital and marital relationships. The RELATE Institute also administers and oversee research connected to the RELATE and READY assessment tools. The RELATE questionnaire is the most comprehensive premarital/marital assessment available. This questionnaire was designed for use with individuals or couples who are single and unattached, steady dating, engaged, cohabiting, married, or contemplating remarriage. Tens of thousands of couples and individuals have benefited from these questionnaires during the past 20 years. The RELATE database is exclusively able to address many important research questions about young adult development and couple formation due to its unique combination of large sample size (N = 20,000+ couples) and richness of relationship-related measures. The RELATE team has published dozens of studies on relationship and healthy marriage in some of the leading outlets such as the Journal of Family Psychology, the Journal of Marriage and Family, the Journal of Social and Personal Relationships, and Archives of Sexual Behavior.
